Read the passage. Shade the redundant words/phrases.

How many did you find?

Last summer, I visited the country of Australia with my family. We had many memorable experiences that I won't soon forget, but there were also some things that I found to be odd and strange.

For starters, Australians speak the same, identical language as me. However, they use a lot of abbreviations in their everyday language and vocabulary. For example, Australians often seem to refer to breakfast as "brekky" and the afternoon as "the arvo" quite a bit. They call their friends by shortened, abbreviated names, such as "Johnno", "Stevo" and "Shazza." I like the casualness of this. It makes everyone seem like they could be your friend or mate!

Another difference between Australia and my country is the way in which Australians make tea. Instead of boiling water on the stove until it's 212°F, they use electric kettles. When I explained to one lady how I boil my water at home, she looked very confused when I explained to her how I usually heat my water in my country.

Finally, and perhaps most terrifyingly, is the way that Australians drive their vehicles on the left-hand side of the road. I kept forgetting! Luckily, I was fortunate that I didn't need to drive a car myself, but I did try to climb into the driver's side by accident on two occasions!

Nevertheless, I had a wonderful time in Australia. If you have an opportunity to travel and to visit Australia, I would highly recommend it.

Most people agree that going to bed late is a bad idea. We learn this as children, are constantly reminded of it as teenagers and many of us finally get the message by the time we are adults. But why is going to bed in the early hours so detrimental to your health?

You may have heard of circadian rhythms. These are people's natural sleep-wake cycles, tied to the 24-hour clock and the cycle of light and dark. Circadian rhythms tell the brain when to release certain hormones, when to fire up metabolism, when to detox parts of the body and how to regulate body temperature. Unfortunately, if you go to bed very late every night, your circadian rhythms will be disrupted. This can lead to fatigue and memory problems in the short term, and the damage of organs, problems with metabolism and chronic diseases, such as diabetes and heart disease, in the long term.

Read the passage and answer the questions.

Detective Ellery shivered, as he stared out the window. The lights of the city sparkled below. As tears formed in his eyes, Ellery blinked them away. He turned and picked up his suitcase from the carpet, shrugging on his thick coat with his opposite arm. Then, he swept from the room, letting the heavy door slam behind him.

Two days later, Ellery sat on a low chair, sinking his toes in the warm sand. A crossword book rested in his lap, but none of the puzzles were complete. Instead, the margins were filled with names and dates relating to the Wallenburg murder case.

"It's over, my dear," said Ellery's wife. "After forty-five years, don't you think you've earned this new life?"

Ellery grunted something under his breath. It hadn't been his choice. She would never understand what it was like to leave something unfinished. But he smiled through his gritted teeth and replied, "You're right, of course."

1. What was the weather like in the city? Provide evidence. _____

2. Why do you think Ellery is sitting on the warm sand? _____

3. Do you think Ellery will have an easy time adjusting to his retirement? _____

Read the passage and answer the questions.

I don't want to move to New Hampshire. I will tell you my reasons why.

First of all, I love my current school. I just finished seventh grade, and I cannot wait to take classes next year with all my friends.

Secondly, my bedroom is amazing. I finally got my own room last year when my sister left for college. I have spent the past few months painting the walls and coaxing my parents into buying me new furniture, such as my corner desk and chaise lounge.

Finally, I love the community in our town. Everyone knows everyone else. I can't walk down the street without waving to half a dozen familiar faces. I cannot imagine that happening in a new neighborhood. Well, not for a long while.

Please reconsider our move, Mom and Dad!
